Mutations in the polycystic kidney disease 1 gene (PKD1), located on chromosome 16p, cause autosomal dominant polycystic kidney disease (ADPKD). Recently, over 30 ADPKD loci other than PKD1 have been mapped on both human chromosomes (chrs) 1 and 12. A locus associated with ADPKD on chr 16p was mapped to be between D16S404 and D16S414. We performed a candidate gene screening of the PKD1 region and found a novel intragenic deletion of 27 bp in exon 2 in a Japanese ADPKD family. The deletion resulted in a frame shift in PKD1.The Problem of Democratic Control I am just so over the concept of "democratic control". It's nothing more than what the industry wants. And what we have here is corruption of the fact that people can be very different and have different attitudes about how they should be governed. It's the lie that diversity is more than a co-existing of differences, that it's about affirming the differences in our nation in a constructive manner. No, it's not like that. We need to be united, we need to listen to each other, we need to create comity. We don't need to listen to different things, because there are things that a majority of a country can accomplish without hearing from minorities. I like the concept of democratic control, only because I think that it's the only system that can really survive a free market. It's a nice little bubble that allows you to exist, and all the accoutrements and all the perks that come with it, but it's not sustainable in the long run. And this system, of democratic control, creates
